This document will attempt to provide a range of information on how to access a variety of electronic resources and e-textbooks.

Information from textbook publishers:

1.   Macmillan Learning
Contact: https://twitter.com/MacmillanLearn/status/1238437403817316352?s=20
If your school is transitioning from in-person to online classes b/c #COVID19 we're here for you. Our #edtech tools - LaunchPad, Sapling, FlipIt, iClicker & Lab Sims - are free this semester until July 1 for impacted customers using our print books. Contact your rep for details.

2.   McGraw-Hill
McGraw-Hill is making their core digital learning platforms, McGraw-Hill Connect and ALEKS, available for free to any student and instructor who needs it for the remainder of this Spring 2020 term https://www.mheducation.com/highered/support/connect/how-to-move-your-course-online

3.   Oxford University Press

Many of you have suddenly found yourselves preparing to move your classes online as COVID-19 continues to affect campuses across the country.

We can help. At Oxford University Press, we understand the challenges of building an online course, even in the best of circumstances. We want to support you in this rapidly evolving climate. Now through the end of this term, we are offering a wealth of free resources and access so that you and your students will experience as little disruption as possible. These include:

Access to digital, course-specific resources that you can use to flesh out your online "lectures"— including videos, simulations, animations, activities, flashcards, quizzes, test banks, PowerPoints, and more—that can all be loaded directly into your LMS

Instructions on how to access your desk copy as an eBook

Free access for your students to OUP Higher Education eBooks for the balance of this term

Free access to online courses from our sister company Epigeum to help you learn strategies for managing the digital classroom

Webinars for teaching specific disciplines online

We encourage you to check back regularly as we continue to update with additional resources. Please note: you don't need to have adopted an OUP text to use these resources. In fact, we encourage you to share this email with any colleagues who you think will find these helpful.

4. Cengage (eBooks)
   If your campus has been closed due to COVID-19, your students on US campuses get a free subscription to Cengage Unlimited through the remainder of the term, which gives them access to all Cengage ebooks and platforms.

   Our mission is to help as many students, faculty, and institutions as we possibly can. Because of this, we are offering:

- Free access to our entire catalog - all of our online learning platforms and eTexts - through Cengage Unlimited, through end of term, to any student in any class at any U.S. college that has been impacted by COVID-19.
  - o By opening up Cengage Unlimited, students get access to high quality, proven materials and digital platforms across 675 course areas, all in one place.
  - o They also get access to our Cengage Mobile App, which enables them to access learning materials in the event that they do not have internet access or a computer at home.
- Open access resources for educators, both resources for general best practices and strategies that can be used by anyone using any product, and resources for using Cengage's products online. And for faculty who want to use our courseware, personalized services to get up and running.

Digital Learning Platforms

Digital Learning Platform vendors serve as aggregators for many different publishers' textbooks. The two listed below are providing free access to textbooks that they handle. Each may be a little different, but they may be able to help provide access to e-textbook copies of textbooks.
